Satellite broadcast of inauguration ceremony to be carried nationwide

As the crowds flock to Kendall Green this Friday, Oct. 21, to see Dr. King Jordan inaugurated as the eighth president of Gallaudet University, people throughout the country—from California to Massachusetts—will be sitting in front of television screens to view a live satellite broadcast of the event.

A satellite truck will be arriving on campus Friday morning to provide the satellite coverage. Five sites on campus will receive the broadcast: the Field House, Hughes Gym, Elstad Auditorium, the Model Secondary School for the Deaf Auditorium, and the MSSD Gym.

But, as a result of the cooperative arrangements of several offices on campus, crowds will be gathering at six or more locations throughout the country to view the inauguration and participate in their own celebration.

Sites for the gatherings include Gallaudet regional centers in Kansas City, Kan., and Haverhill, Mass., plus Dallas, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Chicago. Atlanta, Miami, and the regional center in Honolulu are also possible sites for viewing.

Each gathering site will have a host, and breakfasts or other activities are being arranged in conjunction with the viewing of the inaugural event.

The satellite broadcast is sponsored by the President's Office, Public Relations Office, Department of TV, Film, and Photography, School of Communication, Office of Alumni Relations and Advancement, and College for Continuing Education.

In addition, any home, business, or school throughout the country with a satellite dish or capability will be able to receive the broadcast on either of two satellites: C-Band—Westar 5 Transponder 2 Direct Channel 3 Receiver Frequency 5985ghz; or Ku-Band—Gstar 1 Transponder 3H Offset Frequency 118.37.

The inauguration begins at 10 a.m. on Friday. Jordan will be introduced and installed by Board of Trustees Chairman Philip Bravin. Speakers will be Sen. Tom Harkin (D-Iowa), chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on the Handicapped, and Justin Dart, chairman of the Task Force on the Rights and Empowerment of Americans with Disabilities. Following the ceremony, receptions will be held on the Kendall Green Mall and Faculty Row.

Faculty, staff, and students driving to campus on inauguration day are encouraged to park in Lot 7 of the RFK stadium. On Oct. 21, regular parking will be banned in several areas, including the Field House (Zones D and E), Hall Memorial Building (Zone C), and the Plaza, both east and west areas (Zones C and E).

Shuttle bus transportation will be provided between Gallaudet and RFK on Oct. 21 and Oct. 22, with pickup points at College Hall, the Field House, and Lot 7 at RFK. The schedule is:

University Week here; crowds expected

Kendall Green will be filled with activity this week as people from campus and throughout the country celebrate Gallaudet's status as a university.

From the opening Spirit Week ceremony held on Sunday, Oct. 16, to the culmination of the week at the Celebration of Excellence Ball next Saturday night—with the inauguration of President King Jordan in between—the week is filled with a variety of events and activities for everyone.

Most of the campus community is expected to gather on Faculty Row Tuesday, Oct. 18, for the community picnic and games scheduled from 3-6 p.m. Across the road in Building T-9, the Gallaudet University Press 50 percent off sale will be going strong from 1-5 p.m. During that time, people will be able to meet Frances Parsons, author of I Didn't Hear the Dragon Roar.

People on campus can also meet Dr. John Schuchman, author of Hollywood Speaks, in the Gallaudet Bookstore on Wednesday, Oct. 19, from noon-4 p.m. and on Saturday, Oct. 22, from 9 a.m.-noon.

In addition to the community lecture on sign languages and spoken languages by Dr. Carol Padden held Monday, Oct. 27, from 4-6 p.m. in Elstad Auditorium, people on campus will be able to enjoy three lectures on varied topics this Wednesday, Oct. 19.

T.J. O'Rourke of T.J. Publishers, Inc. will be speaking on "Deaf Entrepreneurs" from 10:30-noon in Ely Auditorium. The lecture is sponsored by the School of Management.

People who miss Dr. Gilbert Eastman's Monday lecture on "Visual-Gestural Communication" have a second opportunity to catch it on Wednesday from 2-4 p.m. in the Elstad Annex/Rehearsal Room.

And to help commemorate the week of March 6-13, "A Sociological Perspective on DPN" will be held from 3:30-5 p.m. in Ely Auditorium.

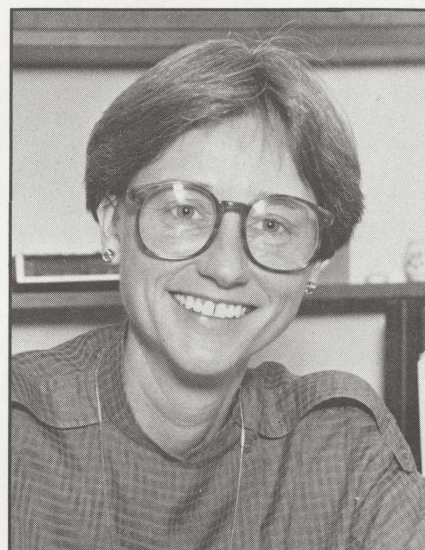

Presenters are Dr. Sharon Barnartt, Dr.

John Christiansen, Dr. Richard Meisegeier, and Barbara White.

On Wednesday evening, the campus will honor recently retired faculty members Angelo Corte, Carol Garretson, Shirley Stein, and Dr. Gilbert Delgado with a reception from 5-6:30 p.m. in Chapel Hall.

On Thursday, Oct. 20, the Edward Miner Gallaudet Residence will be open from 2-4 p.m. Open houses will also be held throughout campus.

Gallaudet's homecoming football game against New York Maritime will begin at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 22. Following the game, the Post-Homecoming Bash will begin at 4 p.m. in "Ole Jim." Admission is $5. University Week will end with the Celebration of Excellence Ball, starting at 8 p.m. at the National Building Museum.

Lewis develops program to improve employees' job skills, opportunities

Many Gallaudet employees will soon be able to take advantage of a new staff development program at the University that can enhance their job skills, help them learn new ones, and provide an opportunity for potential career advancement.

The person pulling it all together is Kayt Lewis, Gallaudet's coordinator of employee development and relations. The position is new at Gallaudet this fall. Lewis, formerly the benefits specialist with the Personnel Office, began working in her new capacity on Sept. 20 as part of the Office of Administrative and Community Services, directed by LaVarne Hines.

"I want to try to customize and design programs that would be useful to employees here on campus," said Lewis. "Ideally, this program could really carry someone from their first day here, to help them along their career path with both personal and professional development."

Work should be finished next month on the installation of new steam and air conditioning lines to Peet Hall and "Ole Jim" from the Central Utility Building's main line. Ground was broken for the $125,000 project in August and is part of an upgrade to the University's pipe lines which began about eight years ago.

New cognition symposium will precede Deaf Way next summer

Historically, educators clung to the presumption that the deaf student was more limited in learning potential than the hearing student. But research, particularly over the past decade, has proven the falseness of that school of thought.

Still, according to Dr. David Martin, dean of Gallaudet's School of Education and Human Services (SEHS), "there's much fascinating work yet to be done on thinking and cognition, education, and deafness."

To keep track of the advances in research being made internationally in the field, a symposium for professionals from various disciplines was held at Gallaudet in 1984, and because such great strides have been made since then, a second one has been scheduled here for July 5-8, 1989.

The Second International Symposium on Cognition, Education, and Deafness will continue in the tradition of the 1984 gathering of 210 teachers, researchers, professors, theoreticians, and parents of deaf children, said Martin, who is the coordinator of the symposium.

The previous symposium set a stage for professionals to share their work in a wide spectrum of issues on the mental processes by which deaf learners acquire knowledge, and to set a research agenda for the future.

The topics presented in the 1984 gathering were compiled and published the following year by The Gallaudet University Press under the title Cognitive Education and Deafness: Directions for Research and Instruction. The research goals that were set at that time have now been met, and new goals and another book will result from this second symposium.

Presently, abstracts of presentation topics are being reviewed by the Symposium Planning Committee, made up of representatives from SEHS and several other campus units.

About 35 topics will be selected, compiled, and sent in advance to the expected 250 participants. The symposium participants are expected to read the papers beforehand and select topics that interest them most. Then, at the symposium, they will meet with the authors and discuss those issues. As a result of the interaction, the authors will revise their papers and submit them for the book.

Martin said that the symposium was purposely scheduled to precede The Deaf Way festival and conference, to be held here July 9-14, to make it easier for people interested in both events to travel to Gallaudet.

Anyone wishing to receive a registration packet for the symposium can contact Geraldine Slaughter, x5520.

Staff development program begins

The concept of staff development is not new at Gallaudet. The institution did have a centralized staff development program that began in 1975, but it faded away during the 1980s. Now, at the instigation of President King Jordan, staff and faculty development is a priority at Gallaudet.

Jordan has said in earlier interviews that he would like to see a comprehensive development program for faculty and staff. Gallaudet already has an existing faculty development committee that will be working on professional development programs for faculty.

Lewis plans to start off small, solicit input from individuals and many areas on campus, and "build a really strong, stable program. We want to have a good foundation," she said.

Staff should soon be receiving a survey—if they have not already—asking about the kinds of workshops they would like to have available. The surveys will be used as a guideline for scheduling workshops and seminars next year.

Two free workshops are already planned for early November. The first focuses on office skills and the effective use of available resources. Employees will learn how to work with various offices on campus, including Accounting, Contracts and Purchasing, Transportation, and other areas of the Physical Plant on items such as payroll, personnel action forms, travel vouchers, check requests, and purchases.

The second workshop will help clarify the Financial Management System used on campus and can be attended by anyone who handles a budget or would like to learn more about it.

Lewis' goal is eventually to offer seminars conducted by outside experts, plus have a comparable number conducted by members of the campus community. Most will be free, and a few may include a nominal charge that will be billed to the departments of participants.

"Here in a university setting we have a gold mine of talent, skill, and teaching experience," she explained. "We can tap into that and use it."

Announcements

MSSD invites the campus community to view colleges from across the country at its College Fair on Wednesday, Oct. 19, from 8:40 a.m.-2:55 p.m. in the MSSD Gym. (not Thursday, Oct. 20, in the MSSD LRC as originally stated.) MSSD seniors can also meet individually with college representatives by appointment from 3-5 p.m. For more information, call Glenda Ennis, coordinator, x5375.

"How Alumni Can Spread ASL and Deaf Culture" will be presented by Mary Anne Pugin on Wednesday, Oct. 26, as part of a lecture series sponsored by the Department of Sign Communication. On Wednesday, Dec. 7, Dr. Mike Kemp will speak on "Deaf Culture in Latin American Countries." Both lectures will occur from 5-6 p.m. in the Ely Center Auditorium. For more information, call x5200.

Lewis also hopes to coordinate her efforts with faculty development and other areas on campus such as Continuing Education. "I see a lot of cooperative opportunities," she said. "There are systems that exist now that would be easy to plug into."

Staff development offerings will begin with programs of general interest to larger numbers of people. But more specific areas may also be covered, and if individuals request workshops, Lewis will canvass the campus to determine the level of interest. She also expects to expand the benefits orientation for new employees to include offerings such as an introduction to deafness.

"I see great potential for the program," Lewis said. "It's very exciting." As a Gallaudet employee for the past 10 years, Lewis looks forward to the opportunity "to be able to give back to the University, to make a contribution to the quality of the working environment."

Many individuals have already contacted Lewis with ideas and materials, and she emphasized that she is open to suggestions and assistance. Employees with ideas for workshops can call Lewis at x5363 or send a message via E Mail to HR ____ KLEWIS.
